104th AEPi convention proves to be big one for Beta Delta

This past August DePaul's AEPi chapter sent 4 active members to Las Vegas for AEPi's 104th international convention. Along with these members, a few alumni joined in for what proved to be a ceremonial convention for the Beta Delta chapter and its members and alumni.

All four active members had the chance to spend an entire week at convention after they all participated in a pre-convention institute.

Chad Rubin and Jonah Goodman both took part in the Hineni institute where they learned more about their Jewish identity and how to better the world. Will Rosenberg and Aleks Gleyzer were able to participate in the Michael Leven Institute, which was led by Beta Delta alumnus Josh Sushan, where they met with distinguished alumni and developed their business skills. Rosenberg and Gleyzer were part of the first Leven group that was given a case study to participate and speak in.

The largest news of the week came from Supreme Council where alumnus Michael Waitz was voted in to the Supreme Council of Alpha Epsilon Pi. Waitz is the youngest member of the board at 30 years young and the first ever Beta Delta member to be part of the council.

Beta Delta proved to be a notable chapter as it only took 9 years for an alumnus to join the supreme council from chartering, proving to be the fastest chapter in the world to do so.

Graduates Off and Running Out of The Gates

Caleb Bromberg (2016) and Michael Mont (2017) have wasted no time after their graduations finding what they love to do. As both men have begun the initial stage in their careers, their paths are different but focused on familiar traits incorporated in AEPi: faith and Perseverance.

Bromberg is starting his first year in Temple Shalom where he is the youth engagement & curriculum coordinator. He focuses on all programming for the 3 youth groups at temple Shalom along with curriculum for the entire school ranging from pre-kindergarten to 12th grade. Bromberg cites his relationship with Judaism was a proponent for his current position and career along with the ability to have a social justice focus in teaching.

“My Judaism has gone through a lot of eb and flow through the year. It’s important that I provide young people with the opportunity to have a relationship with their Jewish history, practice and culture.” Bromberg said.

Stu Lasky, founding father and current chapter advisor, was recognized this past May at the FSL awards for his work the past year as chapter advisor. Stu has spent the past 3 years acting as chapter advisor and helping the undergraduate members develop.

“It is humbling to be nominated by the chapter and recognized & awarded by the school. The award is more of a testament to how successful the chapter has been since becoming chapter adviser. Nothing is more rewarding than walking into chapter and seeing a room full of motivated undergrads working together trying to make a difference in the community.” Lasky said.

Lasky played a huge role in advising with chapter events and finances, utilizing his skills as a financial advisor to provide insight into chapter budgeting and projections. Lasky’s active presence in the chapter has been keen in the morale of the chapter as he constantly goes out to meet new members coming in and all active members in the chapter as well.

After being nominated with a group of 28 from the entire community, Lasky won the Chapter Advisor of the Year award for the 2016-2017 school year. After his great work this past year, Stu and the chapter look forward for the upcoming year and a possible repeat winner.

Michael Mont, 2017 graduate, began his career adventures before graduation with constant work on his app, VenYou, which he states is a combination of tinder and Groupon matching people together based on what they do on Groupon. Along with this, Mont has began his first year as a Risk Assurance associate at PwC, one of the premier firms in the country.

“I’m trying to balance the app and PwC, but they are both very different worlds. PwC is pretty tough and the hours are longer but I’m already getting clients and seeing success. I always wanted to do my own thing and the app was the quickest and most interesting way to do that.” Mont said.

As both men begin the early stages of their new careers, their desire for change and success continue to help them.
