

The Leven Leadership Institute is designed to introduce and reinforce the Leven Leadership Program. This institute teaches undergraduate brothers how to be leaders in the professional world through the implementation of the L.E.V.E.N. Leven Leadership Model.

Geared toward undergraduate brothers, who currently or previously have held a position within the chapter or on campus, with particular emphasis on upperclassmen, this institute will direct our brothers through their transition from being leaders at their universities to leaders in their post-graduate life.

L<sub>earning Mindset</sub> • E<sub>thical Clarity</sub> • V<sub>isionary Thinking</sub> • E<sub>ffective Execution</sub> • N<sub>etworking Drive</sub>

Concepts such as patience, humility and open mindedness is crucial in developing oneself as a leader. The idea that a continuous education is a life-long pursuit and a true leader knows that he is always learning.

Value-based leadership is the idea that our ethics and values guide our leadership decisions. Ethics act as leaders' deepest, most fundamental motivations in how they act. Having clarity on one's ethics will help develop the values Leven Leaders refer to as they transition throughout their lives. These values can be based on core Jewish principles and AEII ideals.

Optimism, hindsight, forward thinking and pragmatism; once a leader understands his ethics and has adopted a learning mindset, he must have vision on how to develop those. Visionary thinking is the habit of focusing on and planning for future endeavors. Leven Leaders will learn how to see the big picture and be pragmatic and realistic when planning goals.

Taking action to accomplish your goals. Productivity and efficiency are key when following through. Leven Leaders will learn how to effectively form habits.

Real leadership means being able to influence and positively empower others to action. A network is crucial for a leader to reach his potential. A Leven Leader knows that one man can do anything but not everything. Leaders will learn how to build relationships that last, communicate effectively and make a lasting impact.